Text 1

Fifteen years ago, I got a call from Lucy Lunt, producer of a new Radio 4 show called Ramblings. She'd seen me on TV, thought I looked a country sort and asked if I was a walker. I was living in London but walked the dogs when I went to my parents' and thought that's what she meant. I had no idea there were people who walked just for the sake of it! But that's how I signed up to present the show.

Text 2

I was quite bossy as a child, ended up being in a lot of trouble at school, working through it then being head girl. Then I went to Cambridge and ended up being president of the Union. I tend to lead and people tend to follow me. It's case of ... follow me over this cliff, why don't you? And people do – it's a real worry!

Text 3

I want to be proud of the decisions that I make. And I probably need to relax a bit more and work a bit less. Not that I find work stressful. People ask, "How do you unwind?" and I think "When am I wound up?" What, playing golf for three days this week? That won't wind me up. Doing the Commonwealth Games for two weeks, I won't be wound up!

Text 4

Any success I have didn't happen when I was fresh out of university. I'm not going to have a bodyguard and an agent on my arm! Although I do get driven a lot more now. That makes a massive difference because I can do my homework, make calls and actually relax. To me, that's quite a big request – saying "I'd like a driver!" is quite diva-ish!

Text 5

My partner and I spend far more time together than most couples do because we walk together, and I think our connection is stronger as a result. It's much more peaceful than driving and it's different from playing golf together, which we love, because when you're playing golf, you're concentrating on your golf, not chatting.

Text 6

This book's the story of the path I've walked, the people I've met, how my understanding of our country has changed and how walking has shaped my life. And I wanted my parents to be in it again, and my brother Andrew, as an adult – it's even more fun to take the mickey out of him now than it was as a child!

Student

You would like to introduce the use of wireless laptops in the classroom as you believe that it will increase communication among students and that internet use will enhance their learning experience. You are sure that student satisfaction is higher when students use laptops. As the president of your school's student parliament, you are going to discuss the issue with your headteacher. Prepare as many arguments related to the benefits as possible of using wireless laptops in the classroom. You WILL persuade them to your way of thinking!

Teacher (playing 'the headteacher')

You are very busy these days and everybody wants you to change how things are being taught in the classroom. You're really just not sure about all this new technology and how it will affect learning. The president of your school's student parliament, has asked to speak to you about the use of wireless laptops in the classroom. You are not sure about the benefits of using wireless laptops as you predict that most students will spend their time browsing the internet, sharing stuff on social media, watching YouTube, and who knows what all else?! The classroom is for classroom activities and there's just no way to control 30 students who are all online.

Look at the pictures and choose three adrenaline sports that you consider the most interesting for you and that you would like to try.

Discuss:

- explain why you chose those three
- say what the advantages and disadvantages of trying those sports might be
- mention if your parents would agree with your choices, why/why not and give reasons
