It's summer again and we can't wait to go on our holiday. But not all holidays are so nice and relaxing. Here is Agnes's story.

Agnes:

Last year I decided to go on a walking tour along the coast of the Baltic Sea. I was fed up with the idea of lying on the beach, sunbathing and doing nothing; what I wanted was an active holiday. I started the preparations in June. I was very excited about it, and I couldn't wait to start.

The first day was pretty good. I walked for about four hours in the morning, and about three hours in the afternoon. But when I got to the place where I planned to spend the night, it turned out that there was not a single bed left free. I had to sleep out on the beach. The second day started with heavy rain, so my things got wet. On the third day I began to have problems with my shoes.

They were supposed to be 'perfect trekking boots for all conditions', but it just wasn't true. My feet hurt so much that I had to take a bus to the nearest town to buy some other shoes. When I was there, I accidentally met my old friend. She invited me to her holiday home in the Lake District, but I refused to go because I wanted to keep walking along the seashore. So I did.

Next day, though, there was not only a problem with my shoes (I mean my new ones), but also another worry: there was no way to go. The track along the shore was blocked for some reason. I thought it would take me a long time to find another route. To make things worse, my feet hurt, so I didn't feel like walking any more. In the end, I decided to call my friend with a house in the Lake District.

When she heard my voice, she said happily, 'Great! We'll be lying on the beach, sunbathing and doing nothing!' Well, I quite liked this idea...

ROLEPLAY

Student

You invited your schoolmate from Australia to spend a weekend with you at your place in the area where you live. Talk to him/her about the destinations you have chosen to show him/her in your area. Say what makes these places special and interesting. The places should not be far from your home and you want to show something which is not in a guide book.
